Hiring Team
Green Thumb Industries

Green Thumb's focus on elevating the digital shopping experience in the cannabis space aligns well with my background in driving ecommerce growth through data-driven product strategies. At LITET, I led analytics-driven optimization across pricing, listings, and PPC campaigns on Amazon and Shopify, which increased revenue by 400% year-over-year and significantly improved advertising efficiency. This experience has sharpened my ability to prioritize features and enhancements based on business impact and customer data—skills directly relevant to maintaining and executing GTI's digital product roadmap.

I'm comfortable owning the full product lifecycle, from ideation through launch and continuous optimization, having managed roadmap prioritization and sprint execution in Agile environments at Chamberlain Group. There, I improved backlog prioritization and release stability by implementing structured frameworks like RICE, which helped align cross-functional teams and stakeholders. I'm eager to bring that same clarity and execution discipline to GTI's cross-functional collaboration with engineering, UX, marketing, and merchandising teams.

While my direct cannabis industry experience is limited, I'm motivated by GTI's mission and the opportunity to contribute to a rapidly evolving market. I'm particularly interested in the role's emphasis on AI spec-driven development and data-informed decision-making. My background includes building KPI dashboards and reporting systems that support growth and product strategy, enabling continuous monitoring of feature performance and customer experience improvements.

I appreciate that GTI values curiosity and technical proficiency, qualities I've demonstrated by asking detailed questions to uncover dependencies and by developing prototypes and specifications that serve as a source of truth for engineering and QA teams. I'm confident my experience with ecommerce platforms, Agile methodologies, and data-driven growth can help GTI deliver seamless, personalized digital journeys that engage customers and drive business growth.

Sincerely,
Ricardo Lugo
