Hiring Team

Partner.Co

Partner.Co's commitment to empowering independent Brand Partners and delivering wellness products that truly resonate aligns closely with my experience and values. I've spent years building and scaling data-driven products and operational systems that simplify complexity and drive measurable impact—whether through AI-powered automation, inventory forecasting, or cross-functional product delivery.

At LITET, I developed AI workflows that automated sales reporting and PPC optimization, cutting manual effort by 80% and enabling daily KPI monitoring. This hands-on work with AI-assisted tools and data integration gave me a practical understanding of how automation can accelerate decision-making and operational efficiency—something I see reflected in Partner.Co's focus on AI fluency and automation to support product and business growth.

I'm also familiar with balancing competing priorities and navigating ambiguity from my experience managing multi-warehouse inventory forecasting and leading roadmap prioritization at Chamberlain Group. Collaborating closely with engineering, UX, analytics, and business teams to translate complex needs into clear, actionable requirements is a strength I'd bring to your agile environment. I appreciate that Partner.Co values curiosity, communication, and learning, which matches how I approach product management—focusing on outcomes, continuous improvement, and building shared understanding.

Joining Partner.Co feels like a natural next step where I can grow into greater ownership and leadership while contributing to a mission I care about. I'm eager to help shape products that support your Brand Partners and customers, leveraging my background in AI-enabled analytics, operational platforms, and cross-functional collaboration to deliver clear value at scale.

Sincerely,
Ricardo Lugo
