Hiring Team
Weedmaps

Leading product teams to deliver clear, data-driven roadmaps has been central to my work, and Weedmaps' focus on balancing monetization with user experience in a complex marketplace resonates with my experience. At LITET, I built KPI dashboards and reporting systems that brought visibility to advertising efficiency and product mix performance, enabling strategic pricing and bundle decisions that grew revenue 400% year-over-year. This aligns with your need to master trade-offs between ad units and consumer retention while driving sustainable business results.

I've also partnered closely with engineering and data science teams to align on technical roadmaps and ensure product feasibility, much like the cross-functional collaboration Weedmaps emphasizes. My work at Emerson Electric involved shaping analytics and API product strategies by balancing customer needs with scalable platform development, which speaks to your goal of translating bold product visions into strategic technological decisions.

Managing and mentoring product managers is another area I'm deeply invested in. I've led teams to establish rigorous data standards and foster a culture of continuous learning, which supports building a strong talent pipeline and high-impact product delivery. I appreciate Weedmaps' commitment to innovation and growth within the cannabis economy—a space with unique regulatory and UX challenges that I'm eager to understand and contribute to.

I'm drawn to the opportunity to lead the Core Marketplace pillar, driving innovation in search, discovery, and recommendations to improve the find-to-order experience. My background in analytics-driven growth and marketplace optimization equips me to identify user pain points and simplify complex problems into scalable solutions that benefit both shoppers and business partners. I look forward to helping Weedmaps build a marketplace that truly serves its users while achieving measurable business impact.

Sincerely,
Ricardo Lugo
